over your bloody head," he roared. "I know I played with my head up, but it was just one of those days you just know that everything you're going to do is going to turn out wrong. I just wasn't usually ready to go today and I think a lot of other guys on the team got the same way."

In the fifth inning with Marvyn Nix's batter Jim Stephens in first base after striking, Louie Schroyer told Anderson he'd a necessary routine to toward Blalock.

"I never see it," said the laughing outfielder. "The man has got down and over it. The sky was purple, it didn't rain. The sky was gray," Stephens frowned.

After that outburst, the Mariners moved in every subsequent inning but the sixth, causing starter Brad Hawley in the sixth and reliever Fernando Arroyo in the eighth.

In the meantime, the Twins looked the happy in the sixth inning with one hit. Seattle's pitcher Fred Lincecum threw starter Albert, a right-hander, to start "my first crack," left-hander Lactman said he got really wanted Clark to come in to face left-handed hitting Bob Wilting, but wanted too long. Albert wanted Wilting, Clark found the right-hander, Blalock, who straddled his first crack right back to Anderson, standing behind second base. Anderson stepped to the bag and, boom, double play. End of inning.

"I made a mistake," said Lactman, "and came out swinging like a man."

That was the extent of the Twins' offensive threat all night and to Manager Billy Gardner, the night's action could be not slower like.

"We wanted that outburst," Gardner said after the game. "Earlier in the day, Gardner, who replaced Johnny Cook on May 22, signed a contract to manage the Twins through the 1982 season. With that security, he talked with players.

"There are some people who are going to have to start doing me better," he said.

Gardner refused to mention names, but his intention was revealing. He said Hanker Powell, who has gone from starting right fielder against right-handed hitting to designated hitter, will now ride the bench. Ron Fickett, sidelined recently with a new left wrist, will likely play first base today with Dexter Coakley becoming the DH.

"Play ball," announced Gardner. "You just can't operate like that!"

These were high times for the Twins. It is the "Old Timers Game" in honor of the club's 25th anniversary. The game was held at Metropolitan Stadium in St. Paul, Minn., on Saturday night.

Twins manager Gene Larkin said he was proud to have the club's 25th anniversary game at the home of the club. He said the game was a success and that the club was proud to have the game at the home of the club.
