Tigers

hitter Jay Johnstone started the third with singles but Repoz lined into a double play. Jim Fregosi then doubled to center, scoring Knoop.

John Miller replaced McLain and Mincher, who had homered twice in the opener, hit the reliever's first pitch off the second deck facade in right center for his 25th homer, giving the Angels a 4-3 lead.

California struck for three more runs in the fourth, with Repoz' two-run triple the big blow, and added another run in the fifth to go five runs ahead.

Winner Jim McGlothlin, who took over for starter Rick Clark in the third, blanked the Tigers until the seventh, when Dick McAuliffe's two-run single closed the gap. Minnie Rojas, the Angels' ace reliever, then stanzaed the door and checked the Tigers in the eighth before giving way to George Brunet.

Rick Reichardt's second inning homer sent the Angels ahead 1-0, but the Tigers rocked Clark for three runs in the second on Ed Mathews' double, Jim Northrup's 10th homer, a walk and McAuliffe's triple.

After Mincher's homer sent the Angels in front to stay, they roughed up Miller and Mike Marshall, another rookie reliever, in the fourth. Two walks, a force out and McGlothlin's infield hit brought one run home before Repoz unloaded his triple to right center.

A double by Reichardt and Bob Rodgers' run-scoring single completed the California assault in the fifth against Hank Aguirre, the fifth of eight Detroit pitchers.

McGlothlin, 12-8, stopped the Tigers on one hit in the first four innings he worked, then was tagged for singles by Bill Freehan and Don Wert. With one out in the seventh, The runners advanced on a ground out before scoring on McAuliffe's single to center. Rojas then came on and got pinch-hitter Gates Brown on a fly to right, ending the rally.

The Tigers mounted a final threat in the ninth when Freehan doubled and Don Wert drew a walk with none out. Brunet then replaced Rojas, retired pinch-hitter Jim Price on a fly to left and got McAuliffe to bounce into a game-ending double play.
