

Etc.

- When a Twins-Yankees game at Shea Stadium dragged on into the 13th inning on July 12, 1975, the teams planned to finish it the next day. But rain washed out those plans, and the finish was delayed by a week, until New York arrived at Metropolitan Stadium on July 19. The game resumed with the Twins as visitors, and finished as an 8-7 Yankees victory when Graig Nettles and Lou Piniella hit back-to-back RBI singles. Until Friday's second game, a makeup of a rain-out at Detroit last week, that was the only time in Twins history in which the Twins batted first in their home state.

Twins at home as road team. 090520 StarTrib

Clipped By:

jjswol

Tue, Jan 19, 2021