Twins

1977, he publicly thanked Griffith for standing by him early in his career.

Relations between the two became strained, however, as Carew negotiated for a contract which would begin after his three-year contract expired in 1979. A speech Griffith made at Waseca in 1978, in which he said Carew had been a fool to sign the three-year contract, exacerbated the situation.

For a while after the Waseca speech, and at times recently, Carew has refrained from publicly criticizing his former boss. But yesterday Carew, who got two hits in the game and raised his batting average to .337, criticized Griffith before and after the game.

Yesterday's crowd was small but not nearly as small as the Twins tiniest crowd — 547 on Sept. 16, 1965. The crowd was comparatively quiet also. That was not a reaction to Fernando Arroyo (3-6), who permitted the Angels only five hits and one run for eight innings before weakening in the ninth, but it may have been a reaction to the Angels, who had trouble with high fly balls all day.

In the first inning, for example, John Castino ripped a high drive to right-center field off Dave LaRoche (3-3), which Don Ford crushed into the fence and could not hold. Castino had a triple. Jose Morales then lifted a high fly down the right-field line which Ford, still favoring his right knee after off-season surgery, dropped as he banged into the right-field foul line tower. Morales had his first triple of the year, scoring Castino, and Morales scored a moment later on Pete Mackanin's ground out.

In the fourth inning with the Twins leading 4-0 and Dave Edwards on first, Mike Cubbage lined LaRoche's pitch down the left-field foul line. Left fielder Don Baylor kicked the ball around in the Angels' bullpen and then threw on a bounce to the outfield grass behind third base. Edwards scored and Cubbage reached second with a double.

That type of play made it easy for Arroyo, who got the first strike over to most of the hitters he faced and who found his breaking ball, which had been somewhere between here and Toledo in his previous starts.
