Frosh HR Clouters Chase Vet Roberts

By HY ZIMMERMAN
SEATTLE, Wash.

The home run, champagne of hits, has Pacific Coast League pitchers reeling. And, in this singular season, no matter who leads the league in long balls, a record will be set.

The Coast league this year will zip through its shortest season in history. The slimmed schedule calls for only 148 games. Thus, no batter will approach the hoary homer mark of 60 in a season, set by Tony Lazzeri for Salt Lake in 1925, when the PCL labored long—200 games.

At this writing, Dave Roberts of the Oklahoma City 89ers was in front of the distance hitters with 25 homers. Dave could come up with 40 for the year.

Yet, the fans' murmurs—and the pitchers' moans—over homers do not center as much on Roberts as on some redoubtable rookie rappers. Roberts is a veteran and known for his power. It is the precocious yearlings who are capturing notice with the unexpected.

Oddly, two are first basemen, Lee May of San Diego and Bill Davis of Portland. May, who stepped into the spikes of another hot San Diego rookie first baseman, Tony Perez, was the first newcomer to reach and pass the 20 total in home runs.

May Falls Into Slump

Lee had hit 21 homers at the halfway point of the season. He then went silent for a full week or might have thrown more challenge at Roberts for the league lead.

Davis, who graduated from the University of Minnesota last year, was not even expected to stick with the Beavers. But the lanky fellow began pounding almost immediately and couldn't be moved. He was on May's heels with 20 homers.

Then, there is Tacoma's Ollie Brown, prime outfield prospect of the San Francisco organization. Brown was in strong contention for rookie slugging honors with 19 homers, most of them strategic swats.

Hawaii also has a callow clouter, Brant Alyea, young outfielder. Brant had 17 fence blasts at press time. Rick Reichardt, the most expensive piece of baseball merchandise in the league, made a slow start but recently has found the range.

For Seattle, he has hit 11 homers and no longer is belying his $200,000 price tag.
